No, it isn't enough that an ex-Con-federate officer surrenders and accepts the situation in good faith; that doesn't en-title him in Grant's riew to a nomination for office—he must not only accept the sit-uation but embrace the Radical party, must indorse all its feul and revolting abomina-tions, must appland the oppressions, the Britler's proposed bill for relieving the Southern poosis from disabilities will crossic a sitr among the Radicals, most of whom are average to relieving any one unless he subscribes to larger to relieving any one unless he subscribes to larger to relieving the continues he subscribes to larger to receive against relieving the disabilities of founders accelerated to founder social ways if Democrats are accluded solely from political considerations. As it requires two-thirds to pass such bill, their actions will insure the defeat of all—[Westler, Disputed of Euclasy. We presume that Gen. Butler's bill has not been published. It is generally understood however to be more sweepingly indorse all its feul and revolting abomina-tions, must applaud the oppressions, the tyrannies, the cruelties, practiced by it to-ward his own people; must insist that the white men and women and children at the South have no rights except such as scala-wags, carpet-baggers, and pegro militia choose to grant them; he must do all these things and a good many more, as Long-street has done, and then he may appire to office if the Senate is only as ready to con-firm his nomination as the President will probably be to make it. understood however to be more sweepingly liberal toward Southern people now subject to political disabilities than any bill or proposition that has yet been offered from the Radical side in either house of Congress. If such is its character, we hope, without the least admiration for its anthor, that it will pass. Butler is probably alming chiefly at the production of a sensation, but we wish well to both him and his sensation so for as the measure in question is

At the close of the war, the friends sation so far as the measure in question is concerned. He made friends with his old enemy Grant, he effected a reconcultation between himself and his bitter asseilant Kilpstrick, and now, if he can and shall, of Gen. Geo. H. Thomas made up a purse of a hundred thousand dollars to buy him a house. Learning what they had done, he thanked them, but shrank from the transaction. Some believe that this was transaction. Some believe that this was the reason why President Grant promoted. Gen. Sheridan over him. Grant doesn't think much of any man's sense who wouldn't take a hop, skip and a jump at the offer of a house and lot. Is it possible that the President fancies that he sees a rebute of himself lurking and coiling in Thomas' rejection of the liberal proposal of his friends? Kilpstrick, and now, if he can and shall, by urging a great policy of right and justice toward a people against whom he has seemed for years to be waging a relentless warfare and upon whom his malice has appeared to be wreaked in overflowing measure, succeed in making some amends in the wrongs he has done, we hope that he will have his due reward, be that what it near.

he will have his due reward, be that what it may.

The Washington dispatch says that Builer's proposed bill for the relief of the Southern people will create a stir among the Radicals. A big stir should be created among them, and a good many hig stirs. We don't suppose that Butler is as powerful with the Radicals of Congress when he supports right measures as when he goes for wrong ones, but they at all times find him formidable, and always yield themselves more or less to his influence. If he is not, as Thad. Stevene was, the Radical is not as Thad. Gen. Forrest publishes that he was one of the importers of the famous cargo of negroes from Africa to Georgia, nine or ten years ago, by the ship Wanderer. He ten years ago, by the ship Wanderer. He states that the negroes were the most double and innocent creatures that he ever saw. He says that their favorite food was bugs and grasshoppers, but that he persuaded them to substitute cooked meat. Why did he do that? Who knows how much of their doublity and innocence may have been caused by their bug and grasshopper diet? serves more or sees to his influence. If he is not, as Thad. Stevens was, the Radical leader of Congress, he comes nearer being so than any other member of either branch of that hedy. It is to be hoped, that, sus-so than any other member of either branch of that hody. It is to be hoped, that, sustained as he probably will be by at least a small portion of his own political party in Congress, and certainly by the whole of the Democracy, he will be able to procure the extension of relief to Southern men from political disabilities without their being required to degrade their natures by subscribing to segre equality. It is an immortal shame that have were not long since all the same that have were not long since all the same distinguished the alleged determination of the Democratic members of Congress to vote against any bill which shall propose to relieve Southern scalawage, yet exclude homorable and respectable Southern Democrats who dave to maintain and axpress opinious that are not a shame to white manhood. Anthony Trollope.

The life of the modern English novellats is not one of ease nor idleness. The amount of work they de to keep up with their literary contracts is wonderful. "Anthony Trollope has always two or three stories at his desk. His industry is as amazing as his invention. He lives some miles from London, and hunts ac egerly as ever. Strange to say, the greater portion of his novels are written between five o'clock and eight o'clock in the morning. He has guests frequently at his house who cajop his society and are not particularly struck by the hour at which he leaves them for the night, but if they are strangers, they ly struck by the hour at which he leaves them for the night; but if they are strangers, they are astonished indeed to find at breakfast the following morning that their host has been up four hours, and has written more than a doson pages. Mr. Trollope has one story ready—a short one, which he is said to deserbe as the most melancholy tale he has ever written." Trollope, aside from his talent as writer, is a man of varied acquirements, is exceedingly well informed about American affairs and keeps himself posted thoroughly about the condition of his own country besides. The Use of Fliritations.

Old stagers will tell you that nothing takes the peach-bloom of verdancy off of a young man like a sound, hard filritation in which young Narclasus gets badly worsted. It makes a man of him, hardens his moral cuticle, and takes the concell out of him effectually. A writer in Lippencott's Magazine, speaking of this, says: "For every man whose heart is broken—we use a phrase current in its romantic sense among women, and which among men denotes the state of mind revealed by profuse smoking and spasmodic devotion to billiards—twenty have their cyes opened, and are, on the whole, considerably improved by the process. "THE PRINCE AND THE MAID."

How little will the people of New York have dreamed, era the World is cast before their doors this morring, of what an event has just occurred in their midst. Here, freshly told for them since the latest sunset, is a "romance of the middle ages," or rather a true of which have the romantic present time, the sequent of which have the romantic present time, the sequent of which have the romantic present time, the sequent of which have been succeeded by the latest very latest the romantic present time. We forget to whom is due the credit of the remark, that a man's usefulness generally dates from the time he loses his interest in women; but, without going so far, we are content to rest upon the conclusion of our own experience—that until a man has had one or two serious flirtations he is not to be relied on for earnest effort."

Treas Politics.

The three parties in Torms are classified as Democrats, Foxes and Cayotes. The Foxes are the Jack Hamitton party; of the Cayotes, the Corpus Christi Advertiser says: "The Cayotes are a leas, lank, saarling, hungry, mangy pack, who would snap at the shadow of a mule's tall to satisfy their cravings. These prowlers after offul are led by 'Death on a Mule,' 'Old Bitternes,' Hamilton, and some canines of small note. They go for the enfranchisement of darkies and scalawage, and the disfranchisement of darkies and scalawage, and the disfranchisement of any white man, Indian, or negro who don's vote their ticket. They are rampant for division of the State, for office, and consequently for increased taxation. They have been legislating for themselves instead of making a constitution for the State of Texas, and represent the scentiment of the African wing of the party."

The Emperor and the Empress were alike fascinated by her. She was soon received at court festivals, in company with her mother, as a favorite guest; and on one occasion—perhaps more than one—accepted an invalation to dine at the Emperor's table. Shielded and detinguished by such approval, it was no maxvel that the maiden—whose loveliness alone has proved at last more potent than the frown of her Imperial friend—had numerous offers of marriage from persons as eminent as most ambitions women would wish to say yes or nay to.

"The Sian os Herseback."

The New York Express funishes this pleasant picture: "The present military complexion of things is not a pleasant contemplation for a republic. It is: 1st. A military President. 2d. A military Executive mansion. 4th. A military guard around the White House. 6th. Then comes Gen. Sherman in command of the U. S. armies, and announces to the country the members of his staff. And who are they? Who but men controlling the head of every bureau stateshed to the War Department, and completely swallowing up the whole Department. The Adjutant General, Faymaster General, Judge Advecate General, Chief of Engineers, and the Chief of Ordinance, all heretofore the subordinates of the Secretary of War, are now declared to be but the staff officers of the General commanding the army. 6th. A military Secretary of War, Texas and Mississippi. 9th. Arkansas under scalaway militiar, and North Carolina under negro militia. If this is reconstruction it is a faiture. It is a singular fact, says the Boston Postalluded to by Mr. Gladstone in his recent speech, that nearly a century and a half ago
the diseatablishment of the Episcopal Church in Ireland was foreseen, or at least suspected, by Dean Swift. In his own will such a change is contemplated, and in the will of his celebrated "Stella," written under his dictation, a similar provision is inserted. By this instrument, dated in 1727, Esther Johnson begreethed 51000 for the praintenance of case the Established Church should be sholtished at any time, the amount should revert to the nearest relative them living. It is not improbable that this legacy of so long standing may yet furnish business for the courts in its final disposal. Dean Swift, however, seems to have regarded the idea of diseatablishment with something of fear, if not of aversion, as in this mention of that contingency he inserts the phress.

About the lat of February, Primes Loyle has been described by the contingency he inserts the phress.

It is certainly a tribute to the shrewdness and foresight of the great clorical wit, that at this late day the Parlament is about to enact a change which will prove correct his estimate of the tendency of ecclesiastical matters over one hundred and fifty years ago.
